"We accept all who wish to help us and each other!"

!!2012 Sir Julius Vogel Award finalist!!

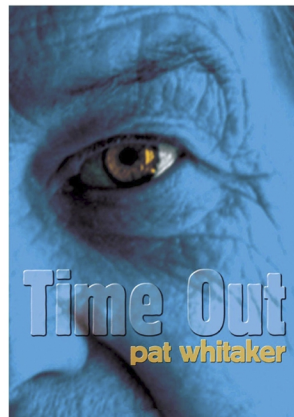

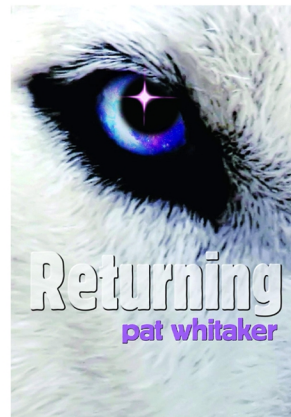

Humanity is under attack from an enemy within. An enemy unable to be seen or confronted. Nemesis tells how in a battle with no rules, each individual must find their own answers, their own way in which to protect themselves and those they love. The book also invites the reader to reconsider the nature of life itself and whether our current definitions are really adequate.

Publisher: Cooper's Press

Returning tells the story of an alien, exiled to Earth, trying first to survive in an unfamiliar world, and then to find a way to return to his own kind. In the process he learns as much about himself as he does about human kind.

The nature of the alien provides an opportunity for the reader to look at our world and ourselves with an external and unprejudiced perspective.

Publisher: Cooper's Press

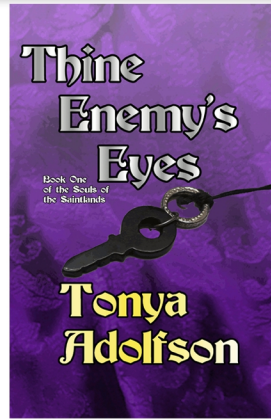

Reporting on so-called alien abductions, a newspaperman is caught up a mixture of drugs, murder and a truly extraordinary set of events. It intermingles crime with romance and Science Fiction, confronts what we may perceive to be true with logic, and asks us to reconsider.

Publisher: Cooper's Press

A physicist, suspected of a murder, tries to answer two questions, who killed the woman in the next room, and how did he see a ghost? There is a rather strong romantic element to this story, but in essence it is a crime mystery. The principal characters, constrained by their connection to a murder investigation, become involved in another, more esoteric investigation of their own.

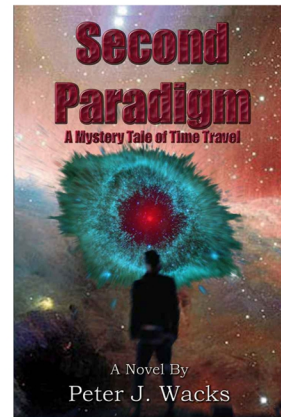

Publisher: Cooper's Press

Catriona Moriarity was dangerous. She could read a person's secret on their face, convince a man to slay his own son and was fast with a blade. Most importantly, she was capable of killing the man Myrgen wanted dead for his crimes against the kingdom. Knowing her meant knowing how to catch her, how to bind her and how to get her to do what he wanted. And he had secured that very precious thing that would make her his slave. But obsession is its own slavemaster, and it never sells cheap.

Stripped of his memories and trapped in the year 2044 Chris Nost must unravel the mystery surrounding his own murder. If he doesn't, history is at risk of unravelling around him. Will history shatter? Will the human race be saved? Will Chris manage to save his own life 41 years after it was stolen from him?

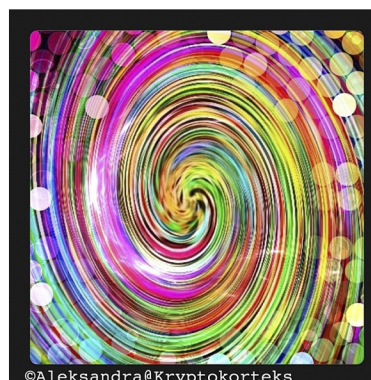

Kip Jensen lives two lives. By day she collects trinkets from the vast wreckage of humanity, searching for clues to the past. By night she is ravaged by visions, by day she has stumbled into a world of secrets, lies, and intrigue.

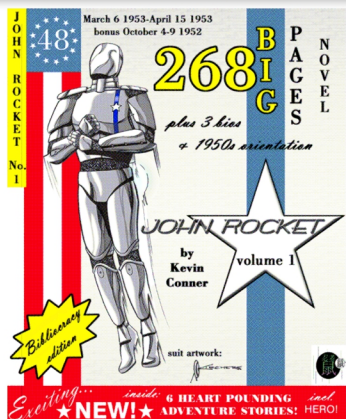

The Resistance wants her to solve the mysteries of the universe. The Government wants her because of her dreams. She just wants to unlock her history--and get a good night's sleep.

Stop by and enjoy Aleksandra Hunyadi's InstaCanv.as website, and enjoy her visions of beautiful geometrics meshed with unique images and color palettes. Don't be afraid to buy one of your favorite prints!
